

Freedman Consulting, LLC: Climate Project Advisor

Freedman Consulting, LLC seeks an experienced part-time Climate Project Advisor to support efforts for a leading philanthropic client on its climate portfolio of investments. Work includes developing portfolio impact goals and metrics, research and deliverable development, strategic advising and planning, engaging with key stakeholders and partners, and program implementation.

The consultant will be involved in the full scope of a climate-focused project work stream -- designing and developing deliverables, while being accountable for client goals, timelines, work quality, and distribution. They will lead the development of project strategy, help define goals, and develop actionable plans to execute program strategies.

The consultant will work closely with and report to a Vice President and conduct work jointly with additional Freedman Consulting staff members who are contributing to this workstream.

The scope of work for the Climate Project Advisor will include:

- Research and portfolio development on climate topics and relevant issues and policies
- Engagement with grantees, funders, and other thought leaders
- Identifying new opportunities for philanthropic impact
- Development of portfolio impact targets and metrics for measuring success
- Written deliverables distilling learnings and impacts to inform overall strategy

Desired Consultant Experience:

Demonstrated philanthropic, policy, and/or research experience and issue expertise is expected. An advanced degree or comparable knowledge and skills in a climate-related field is preferred. Applicants must possess excellent writing and analytical skills, problem solving acumen, strong presentation and facilitation skills, and the ability to think through complex climate policy issues critically and strategically.
